If the Constitutional Amendment reducing the requisite area for forming new Counties prevails. Honea Path, Williamston, Pendleton and Townville will each, we understand, put in a claim for a Court House as the center of a new County, which they severally propose to cut off from this and surrounding Counties. The contest between these places will be spirited and interesting, as each of them is well situated and has strong claims for the coveted distinction.

On Sunday night last Mr. A. Wayne Fant, a resident of this city, but more recently in the employ of the South Carolina Railroad, met with an unfortunate accident in Columbia. He was asleep under a platform near the railroad track, and thit wout his right arm across a rail, when an engine, which was backing, ran over his hand, crushing it badly. It was found necessary to amputate the hand and a portion of the wrist, and at last accounts he was doing as well as could be expected.

A man by the name of Townsend, who has recently been travelling over the County selling patent medicines, has been defrauding a number of our farmers out of his board. He spends a night or two with them, and when ready to leave he tells them he has no small change, but will give them an order on a prominent business man in this city, where, he says, he he's money deposited. Of course, when the farmer presents his order, he finds that he has been duped. Townsend is evidently a dead-beat, and our farmers should be on the alert for him.

Among the attractions in store for the amusement of those who attend the County Fair next week will be the Plume Brill of the Palmetto Riflemen, glass ball shooting, bicycle racing, bag racing, cheese eating, &c., either one of which will more than repay you for your time and admission fee. We understand that the authorities have also granted the privilege for the exhibition of a first-class minstrel and curiosity show on the grounds. These amusements will no doubt add greatly to the Fair, which promises now to be the best ever held. Read the programme in another column, and do not fail to attend.

Mr. G. E. Werber, of Newberry, who recently secured the appointment to the Naval Academy from this District, was examined at Annapolis last week, but was rejected on account of color blindness. Mr. Werber is not really color blind, but did not know that an examination upon colors was a part of the requisites for the Academy, and hence did not prepare himself on that subject. He failed to name some of the shades correctly, and this was attributed to color blindness. In the Naval service a great many different signals are given by means of different colored lights, and hence a Naval Cadet is required to be well up on the colors.
